BRIAN THOMAS DIAS

dias4ndp.nationbuilder.com

I want to run as the NDP candidate for Toronto–Danforth because I believe that a better Canada is more than possible.

Canadians deserve better than the politics of corporate-capitalist special interests, social policy that pays only lip service to devastating income inequality and the divisive, two-party dynamic that inevitably results from an undemocratic first-past-the-post electoral system.

As an activist for human rights and the environment, I will fight for social equality, effective Climate Change initiatives, affordable housing, universal pharmacare, true Reconciliation with First Nations, and meaningful, effective tax reform.

Let me be your strong voice for social justice in Ottawa.

RAVI JOSHI

ravifordanforth.ca

Ravi Joshi is a lifelong resident of Toronto–Danforth who has spent his life working for change in our community and across the country on affordable housing, good jobs, and real climate action. Ravi has served Toronto–Danforth at City Hall as an assistant to Councillor Paula Fletcher, and fought for landmark affordable housing legislation with Social Planning Toronto. He also worked as an equity organizer for Jack Layton's NDP. Ravi co-founded TransformCarlaw, a resident-led climate change initiative and has volunteered with the Leslieville Historical Society and Ward 30 Bikes. He is committed to making real progress in Ottawa.

MIN SOOK LEE

voteminsook.ca

I'm Min Sook Lee and I want to change the world. I live in this riding with my partner and two children. I'm a community organizer, a documentary filmmaker and a professor at OCAD University, where I teach 'Art & Social Change'. We live in a time of crises, and subsequently, one of opportunity. Climate change and income inequality need at-scale responses that forefront racial & economic justice, equity and Indigenous sovereignty. We can do things differently — democracy changes everything.
